Gray Matter

In the spring of 2002, acclaimed filmmaker Joe Berlinger traveled to Vienna to witness the burial of the preserved brains of over 700 handicapped children. The victims had been murdered in a “euthanasia” clinic as part of the Nazi eugenics program that many consider the opening act of the Holocaust. Gray Matter chronicles the director’s journey as he meets clinic survivors and other remarkable voices who shed new light upon this shadowy legacy and the nation that now grapples with its own denial. The film can’t help but raise provocative questions about the nature of guilt, redemption, and denial.
