The Wall: A World Divided

When Berliners woke on Sunday morning, August 13, 1961, they found their city and their lives cut in two by a wall of barbed wire and concrete blocks. East Germans who wanted to flee the oppressive East German regime were forced to escape under, over, or even through the heavily guarded wall. This film chronicles the rise of the wall, explores the lives of ordinary citizens caught in the politics of the Cold War, follows the birth of the freedom movement, and recounts the unexpected events that finally brought down the wall and re-unified Germany.
